Prague

Sir Prague Hotel Library

Although Sir Prague Hotel is located just a few steps from the Vltava River and the Dancing House in the centre of the capital, it is still a peaceful retreat in the heart of Prague. An even quieter and more intimate space is its library, which functions more as a lounge than a formal meeting room. A quiet room with excellent acoustics for conversation, it is suitable for strategic meetings and discussions.

Sir Prague Hotel, situated close to the Vltava riverbank and near Prague's iconic buildings such as the Dancing House and Mánes, first opened its doors in March 2025. In addition to 76 elegant rooms, the Seven North restaurant, a bar with a cosy inner courtyard, a gym and a sauna, the hotel also includes a tranquil library on the ground floor, accessible directly from the main entrance in front of the reception. The stylishly furnished lounge is therefore an ideal place for confidential meetings. Its design and furnishings reflect its purpose: dark wood panelling, bookshelves, the muted warm light of Venetian chandeliers and comfortable lounge seating. It feels highly representative, peaceful and comfortable. For meeting participants, offerings include coffee-break refreshments or catering from the Seven North restaurant, complimentary Wi-Fi access and concierge services. Guests who also choose to stay at the hotel can admire the carefully designed and thoughtful interior by British designer Linda Boronkay, a celebration of the city's multi-layered artistic and historical influences.

Southern Lounges 1–2

At The Prague Congress Centre

Although the Prague Congress Centre is perceived by the public and some clients primarily as a venue for large events, among its 20 halls and 50 lounges you will find design and historical gems, including Southern Lounge 1 and Southern Lounge 2 – both intended for meetings of small groups.

On the first of the four floors of the vast Prague Congress Centre (PCC) lies Southern Lounge 1, also known by the nickname “Schwarzenegger Room”, which it gained thanks to a promotional video starring the world-famous celebrity, filmed precisely in this room. Southern Lounge 1 is exceptionally popular among advertising and film creators thanks to its design, dominated by a striking artistic chandelier whose size and shape mirror the long oval table surrounded by original luxurious armchairs. All interior elements are original, including carpets and wallpapers – all designed for maximum comfort for up to 24 persons seated here.

Directly above Lounge 1 – on the second floor – is Southern Lounge 2, nicknamed the “Obama Room” in reference to the meeting between the US President and Czech President Havel held here in 2009. This room is also dominated by an artistic chandelier, this time in the shape of a hemisphere composed of elements resembling test tubes, with a circumference corresponding to the round table around which 12 very comfortable armchairs are arranged. Here too, all furnishings and decorations originate from the early 1980s – beauty and luxury are timeless categories.

The Vincenz Priessnitz Lounge

The main monumental building – the Priessnitz Sanatorium – is not only the dominant feature of the spa complex, but of the entire surrounding area. Its architectural expression, interior layout, architectural details, and the personality of its architect make it one of the finest and most impressive buildings in the Jeseník region.

Alongside treatment and health prevention, spa resorts have always been sought-after social and cultural centers where prominent and influential figures would gather. Archbishop's Palace

The Archbishop's Palace in Olomouc, an important example of Baroque palace architecture in Moravia, is not only the active residence of the archbishops of Olomouc and others involved in the daily life of the Church, but also a place where history and renowned figures have passed through (including the stay of Maria Theresa, the accession to the throne of Emperor Franz Joseph I, a council of the Austrian emperor and the Russian tsar before the Battle of Austerlitz, and the visit of Pope St. John Paul II).

The halls are furnished with original historical furniture and fittings, including antique oriental carpets and Neoclassical chandeliers that witnessed the accession of Franz Joseph I to the throne. Also noteworthy is the collection of ceramics, glass, and porcelain. The halls can be rented on a short-term basis and used for social and cultural events, or even for the signing of an important business merger. All of this can be at your disposal for your important meetings with business partners or associates.

Telegraph

The Telegraph Multifunctional Center is located just a few steps from Olomouc's main train station. Thanks to a thorough yet sensitive renovation, the genius loci of the unused industrial building—a former telephone and telegraph factory—has been preserved. An ambitious concept has emerged that honors the original purpose of the site not only in its name but also in its mission. The primary goal of Telegraph remains connection: linking art and the public, live culture and the arts, or business and leisure.

In addition to the gallery, the project also includes a comfortable hub, meeting rooms, private boxes, a multifunctional hall for briefings, as well as a versatile space that can serve as a cinema or a luxurious rooftop loft. Telegraph offers spaces suitable for private or corporate events, business meetings, workshops of all kinds, or accommodation. The highlight is the aforementioned spacious LOFT, a charismatic environment that will both impress and enchant you and your invited partners with its unique atmosphere.
