When time knows no bounds

The ideal place for a wander around Liberec and the nearby forests, away from the bustling city, is the Liberec Heights - a lookout tower, hotel and restaurant all in one with a unique look that takes one back to the past.

The building, in the style of a mediaeval knight's castle, has a 25-metre-high tower that, after you've climbed the 107 steps, offers an amazing view of Liberec and the surrounding area. Besides its breathtaking panoramas and period interiors, this historical and newly renovated unique building has a luxuriously equipped hotel that can accommodate up to 30 people and combines period architecture with state-of-the-art equipment. The modern setting is further enhanced by a relaxation zone, with private wellness sessions available, as well as a restaurant that pays homage to traditional Czech and Austro-Hungarian cuisine.

However, Liberec Heights also offers spaces for a wide variety of corporate events. The inner hall equipped with audiovisual technology can accommodate up to 100 people, making it ideal for presentations and social events. There is also an outdoor sun terrace, which can be closed off for all kinds of events and where you can grill or roast sausages in good weather.

The building's owners also hire out an additional space, not only for Christmas parties, which can be considered the complete opposite of the Liberec Heights. Klub Lípa, as it is called, is said to be the most modern music club in Liberec, and, unlike the lookout tower, is located right in the city centre. The place, which hosts a vibrant music scene all year round, offers companies and organisations the chance to hire its halls and bar, a modern 20 m<sup>2</sup> LED screen, professional sound systems, as well as sound engineers and DJs.

A fragile dazzle: when the sparkle of the snow isn't enough

A place where tradition, a love for craftsmanship and unique handiwork come together. Novotný Glass in Nový Bor, which brings together all the three principles of glassmaking, strives with skill and a passion for Czech crystal to keep one of the region's oldest crafts alive, and has plenty to offer not only history buffs and art lovers.

This family glassworks complex, designed by acclaimed architect Bořek Šípek, consists of a glass workshop, a smelting works, a museum and a restaurant, and is one of the few places where you can watch the glassmakers at work. One view is from the promenade of the Novotný Glass Museum – a museum of modern glass, devoted to the applied and visual arts and exhibiting some exceptional works by leading glassmakers from Czechia and abroad. In 2015, the second floor and its original roof were added, centred around the exhibition entitled IGS History and featuring works created during international symposiums held in Nový Bor since 1982. You can then get a different view from the Huť Glassworks Restaurant, allowing visitors to see glass being crafted behind a glass wall, while enjoying some of the fine local cuisine.

The unique setting and atmosphere of the restaurant and the adjacent Club Áčko and Billiard Club Áčko are ideal for corporate and other events. Anyone interested can take a guided tour of the museum or blow some glass with the master glassmakers.

Mountain countryside, fresh air, and a unique landmark offering amazing views of the Jizera Mountains and elsewhere. That's the Královka viewing tower rising high above the treetops, one of the most famous stone lookout towers in North Bohemia. # Empire Hall Prague

A Christmas party spiced up with a warm drink in a garden glowing with magical lights is a unique experience that awaits guests at Prague's Empire Hall.

The Empire Hall is an extension of the 17th-century building now known as the Slovanský dům, or Slavic House. The Slavic House is a social, business and cultural centre on the busy pedestrian zone in Na Příkopě ulice. The Empire Hall, which has a total capacity of 900 people, has three halls: a gallery, a small hall and a foyer, with adjacent technical facilities.

The Empire Hall's Art Deco furnishings and decorations make it easy to hold a spectacular Christmas party in the 1930s style - the era in which the Empire Hall was built. What makes the Empire Hall so unique is that a Christmas party can include a joint toast with a hot drink in the Slavic House courtyard, which transforms into a fairy-tale garden with magnificent Christmas lights during Advent. Guests who prefer to stay in the warm can also enjoy their mulled wine or punch in one of heated Christmas igloos.
