A spa or a gallery?

The sensuous brushstrokes of Czech and European artists in sumptuous picture frames and set amidst the round shapes of beautiful and incredibly lifelike works of sculpture. That's the Liberec Regional Gallery, which boasts a collection of 21,000 works of art from almost everywhere in Europe, so no wonder it is known as the Museum of European Art.

The gallery collections of paintings, graphic works, drawings, sculptures and historical objects are displayed in a total of three permanent exhibitions accompanied by an interactive exhibition and an exhibition on the history of the gallery itself, offering visitors a fascinating journey back through time that takes them from the 16th century to the present day. Although the gallery is home to a far-reaching history, it is also a place where the past writes itself. That's because the building that houses the gallery was originally designed as the city spa, which was located here with its Roman-Irish and steam baths until the 1980s. The conversion of this unique building was then awarded the Grand Prix of Architects - the National Architecture Award - in 2014.

However, this wonderful building with its rich history is also the ideal venue for corporate events and meetings. Its conversion into a modern cultural hall means the former pool hall with space for up to 200 people is suitable for conferences, congresses and seminars, making for an out-of-the-ordinary experience in an attractive setting. Anyone interested can enhance their programme with a guided and interactive tour or an art workshop led by experts, enabling everyone to discover their inner artist.

A pilgrimage site and a camp, a dilapidated ruin and an educational centre

In the heart of the Jizera Mountains, not far from the Libverda Spa, lies the inconspicuous little town of Hejnice, home to a grand historical gem that has lived through times of darkness and unprecedented glory.

The Baroque building was constructed in 1692 by Count Franz Ferdinand of Gallas and was intended mainly for members of the Franciscan Order, who managed the local church in the village, and educated and provided spiritual care for the local people and pilgrims. The building thus became an important pilgrimage site and Hejnice saw the height of its glory during this era. However, the year 1950 heralded the beginning of the end for the building, and instead of a spiritual centre, the building tended to evoke fear and a sense of threat. The communist totalitarian government converted its interiors into a prison for monks and nuns for 5 years, and in the years that passed the building slowly fell into disrepair. The monastery was returned to the Franciscans in 1991, and after it had been dedicated to the Litoměřice bishopric and refurbished, it was opened to the public as an International Centre for Spiritual Renewal.

Nowadays, the former monastery serves as an educational, conference and pilgrimage centre, and besides accommodation, also offers mental and physical regeneration programmes. Participants can rest and relax in the refectory and small gym. The site offers a lecture hall for up to 100 people and smaller lounges for 30 people. The monastery garden is also available for non-traditional conferences or group meditation sessions.

Behind the curtain of the ages

When history meets art and culture, it creates a unique combination that links the future with the past, and passion with tradition. The František Xaver Šalda Theatre in Liberec, which consists of two stages - the Šalda Theatre and the Little Theatre, has been honouring this link for 140 years, and strives to offer audiences a brilliant spectacle packed with powerful and unforgettable moments through drama, opera and ballet.

Theatre performances are held in the Neo-Renaissance building, whose origins date back to shortly after the former Soukenické Theatre burned down in mysterious circumstances. The foundations of the new theatre were laid in the early 1880's, and in 1883 it was inaugurated with a performance of Schiller's William Tell. The main curtain was designed by the Austrian Gustav Klimt, the future exponent of the Viennese Art Nouveau and European painting at the turn of the century. Its motif is an allegorical painting entitled The Triumph of Love.

The F.X. A fairytale flower of France on Czech soil

A centre of history and fairy tales, a meeting place for knights, nobles and, of course, the most beautiful princesses. This is Sychrov Chateau in a nutshell, located in the picturesque Bohemian Paradise near the town of Turnov.

Although the origins of the building date back to the 15th century, the history of the chateau and its glory did not begin until 1820, when the residence was bought by the French House of Rohan, which gave it a unique neo-Gothic look. The English-style chateau park also saw its golden age, achieving an unprecedented degree of prosperity during the lifetime of Kamil Rohan and serving as the model for the creation of a number of important arboretums today. The interior of the chateau is lavishly decorated and full of valuable art collections that document the life of the aristocratic families that used to live there.

Sychrov Chateau and its grounds are open to visitors all year round and offer a number of tours focused on history, jewels and fairy tales. Its charm and grandeur have also made the chateau popular with filmmakers, and many of the most well-known Czech fairy tales, such as the famous Goldilocks and the Immortal Aunt, were shot there.

This remarkable place is not only worth a visit for anyone interested in history and art, but also an attractive venue for companies and organisations, which can hire out impressive spaces in the chateau park or hold a royal conference in the chateau itself.

Elegance meets history in a guarded jewel of the past

How about attending an important conference, workshop or meeting, and feeling like a king or queen at the same time? You can have it all at Doksy Chateau in the town of the same name, near the romantic Lake Mácha.

This Renaissance 16th-century building, which was not completed until two hundred years later, was made famous primarily by its owners - the House of Wallenstein, who, apart from military commander Albrecht himself, used the chateau as their family residence until 1945. After it was confiscated and used for a short time as a military research centre, the chateau served as a secondary school and an agricultural college and was opened to the public for the first time in 2013. Today, visitors have the unique opportunity to see how it feels to sit at the royal table or admire the beauty of the adjacent chateau's English-style park through the windows.

The chateau has recently opened a new sightseeing route dedicated to the history of the heritage site and the Wallenstein family that lived there. It has an abundance of state-of-the-art technologies, such as QR codes, a three-screen cinema and touch screens, allowing the creation of a unique modern yet historical tour that takes visitors on a unique journey back through time. Visitors can soak up the period atmosphere in the multi-purpose Knight's Hall, where a number of important cultural events are held.

Add the Crowning touch to your event

Balls, gala evenings, shows, training courses, workshops, weddings or garden parties. The Crowning touch can be added to all these in the very best sense of the word. How? Well, hold your event at the Karlova Koruna (Charles' Crown) chateau in Chlumec nad Cidlinou.

Chlumec nad Cidlinou is within driving distance of the main regional city of Hradec Králové, and close to the exit of the Prague - Hradec Králové motorway. All in all, it is very easy to get to. Your event can be held in two halls in the chateau itself, in the Kinský Riding School, opened just this year, or in the chateau park and Orangery.

50-300 people can be seated in one hall, depending on the table arrangement. In addition, the Riding School has been renovated to make it completely wheelchair-friendly. The entire site is the private property of the noble Kinský dal Borgo family.

As the chateau is a historical building, equipment for corporate events is not a fixed part of the premises, so it is important to discuss all your needs on an individual basis. The Riding School, on the other hand, is a fully multi-purpose venue with state-of-the-art equipment and modern and stylish furnishings. It includes a sound system, projection equipment, lighting, heating/air conditioning, etc.

Where is Hradec Králové's castle?

The castle used to be in the former burgrave's house and the Church of St. John of Nepomuk. It now houses the Municipal Music Hall, which is mainly used for social events and concerts.

Concerts are held here especially at Christmas time, when the big organ is played. The concert hall can seat 172-200 people. There is also a picturesque atrium and the Knight's Hall, which is suitable for receptions. The hall is also used for weddings of up to 40 people, while the atrium hosts outdoor wine or craft events. This space can easily hold 200 people.

It is one of the most historical places in Hradec Králové. As it is only open for special occasions, even many local residents don't know about it.

In homage to the building's historical value, no modern technologies are installed there. Films can be screened in the Knight's Hall. The thick walls mean it is nice and cool inside during the summer. There are renovated toilets in the building. Facilities for performers are also available. The capacity ranges from 40 to 200 people.

The lecture hall has a sound system, a data projector fitted in the ceiling, and a projection screen. A Wi-Fi connection and lighting are provided as a matter of course.

Černokostelecký Brewery and National Brewing Museum

A wedding, meeting or conference, good food and drink, plus the exhibition on display at the National Brewing Museum.

The museum in Kostelec nad Černými lesy is located in the unique authentic premises of the historic malt house, brewery and horse engine, which still contains working historical technology from the 1930s, while two basic phases from the construction of the brewery complex have been preserved. One is the original late Baroque layout from 1840, plus the conversion of the brewery to steam power dating from the very end of the 19th century. In the 1920s and 30s, after the brewery was taken over by a joint-stock company of local innkeepers, who installed brewing technology that was well ahead of its time, much of which has survived to this day.

The unique set of equipment in the original premises of the malt house and brewery offers an extraordinary insight into the industrial architecture, working historical brewing technology and the actual history of brewing in the Czech lands since the construction of the very first breweries to the present day. The exhibition is the only one of its kind in the Czech Republic, and even includes technological systems that cannot be found anywhere else in the world (the largest direct wood-fired boiler on the planet, the only working shower apparatus in the Czech Republic, functional steel cooling shafts, the largest roof over the horse engine mill, the cooper's workshop, the only ice elevator in the country, and so on).

Kratochvíle State Chateau

The unique atmosphere of a Renaissance jewel in South Bohemia.

Kratochvíle Chateau – a building unrivalled in Bohemia dating from the late 16th century. It is a reflection of the flamboyant generosity of William of Rosenberg, one of the kingdom's leading grandees.

The upper hall of the villa – the social hall of the main chateau building on the first floor – can seat up to 120 people. The hall is used throughout the season for chamber concerts, plays and other performances. It can also be used for professional seminars, lectures, musical performances and historical dance shows that require a larger number of seats. The space is not heated, but heat lamps can be installed as required. There are no kitchen facilities on the premises. Toilets are located in the chateau forecourt.

Entrance hall – space for up to 120 people. The social hall of the main chateau building on the ground floor is decorated with hunting and animal motifs. One thing that makes this hall so appealing is that it conveniently opens onto the garden, where events such as exclusive banquets can be held in the parterre, which has a moat running alongside it. It is used for company meetings with a higher standard of refreshments, or for musical performances (count on the fact that the volume needs to be higher here). The space is not heated, but heat lamps can be installed as required. There are no kitchen facilities on the premises. Toilets are located in the chateau forecourt.

Wi-Fi depending on the hall chosen for the event, seating for up to 120 people, data projector and screen, heating (depending on the hall), toilets, small kitchenette

Prague

The social heart of Prague's Vinohrady district

The National House in Vinohrady, a neo-Renaissance-style building, serves as a cultural and social centre. Located in the centre of Prague and with excellent transport accessibility, it is an ideal venue for social, educational and cultural events. Balls and exhibitions are often held here.

It was built in 1894 and consists of a three-winged building that opens onto two streets. It offers three halls and four lounges. The biggest and most beautiful - the Mayakovsky Hall - can hold up to 700 visitors. It is lavishly decorated, with a frescoed ceiling and magnificent chandeliers. The other two smaller rooms – the Rais Hall and the Social Hall - also feature beautiful and elegant décor, and each of them is a complete work of art in itself. Four lounges on two floors to seat a total of over 200 people are suitable for private meetings during group events.

Dubbed the "Vinohrady City Salon", the National House has become the centre of Prague's social life since it was first opened and has borne witness to many revolutionary events that have changed the course of history in Prague and around the country. Nowadays, it is no longer just the centre of Vinohrady; its state-of-the-art technological facilities rank it alongside all other similar large social venues in Central Europe.

An electrifying palace of art

Since 2022, Kunsthalle Praha – the city’s largest private gallery – has been housed in a listed industrial building at a busy intersection below Prague Castle. This dynamic space also offers a variety of options for organising a range of group events.

The building housing what is now the Kunsthalle was built in the early 20th century - during the technological boom - as an electrical transformer station in the neo-Classicist style. The Zenger transformer station served its original purpose for decades, and after the technologies were replaced in the early 21st century, it was converted into a haven of art, culture and dialogue while respecting its architectural and historical value.

Kunsthalle Praha has 5 rooms available for holding social events. Gallery 3 has the largest capacity – with space for up to 400 people. The Kunsthalle can host corporate events and conferences, as well as parties and banquets. Events can include a guided tour of the exhibition or another accompanying programme.

The 16th-century Renaissance Lobkowitz Palace, with its beautiful interiors and breathtaking views of Prague, which has been owned by the Lobkowitz family for more than four hundred years, is home to a permanent exhibition of private collections of priceless artistic and historical value, and also offers a venue for a wide variety of festive and work-related events.

Located in the southern part of Prague Castle, this is the only privately owned building in the complex, with impressive views of Malá Strana, the Old Town and the Vltava River below: The Lobkowitz Palace. The palace, which has been altered many times since work first started on its construction, contains some fine works of art by Bruegel, Canaletto and Rubens, as well as such rarities as sheet music penned by Beethoven and Mozart. The Lobkowitz Palace boasts five stylish halls, the biggest of which – the Imperial Hall – has space for up to 350 people. The magnificent Baroque Imperial Hall is impressively high, with beautiful paintings on the walls and massive chandeliers. The other four historical halls can seat another 300 guests, and a terrace with a view of the city may also be available. For a more intimate setting, there are twelve exquisite lounges.

The Lobkowitz Palace, which has borne witness to some events that changed history over the centuries, is now a remarkable venue for various group events: meetings, conferences, concerts and celebrations. It is a place where the Renaissance and the Baroque come together in perfect harmony, where noblesse is combined with the elegance of ancient times and the beating heart of the modern age.

Fort XX Escot

Fort XX Escot is one of 22 forts that Emperor Franz Joseph I had built around Olomouc in the mid-19th century.

Despite military manoeuvres and the vagaries of nature, the unique fortress number XX in Křelov has been preserved in almost its original state. It is now used to host events, company celebrations, team building sessions, concerts and weddings. This quiet and vast complex in the fields far from the nearest residential houses enables events to be held that cannot be held in the city centre due to lack of space or stricter rules.

The halls have space for 120-150 people, the courtyard has a capacity of 300 people, and when the adjacent outdoor grounds (meadows) are used, events can be held for up to 1,500 people.

Čechy pod Kosířem Chateau

Originally a Renaissance fortress, it was converted into a Baroque four-winged chateau in the early 18th century, during the reign of Princess Theresa of Liechtenstein. The chateau acquired the Classicist look we see today in the early 19th century.

An important era in the history of the chateau in Čechy pod Kosířem came with the arrival of the Portuguese Silva-Tarouca family, who owned the chateau from 1768 until 1945. From 1849 to 1871, the chateau was a favourite residence of the prominent Czech painter Josef Mánes, who created over a hundred works of art there. The adjacent chateau park, covering an area of 21.5 ha, is one of the most valuable romantic landscape parks in the Czech Republic.

After extensive refurbishment, the chateau now offers the chance to hire out the beautiful authentic orangery and the chateau interiors, where there are two halls available - the Ancestral Gallery and the Great Hall. The halls can seat a total of 140 people.

The Archbishop's Palace has been the residential seat of the Bishops of Olomouc since it was first established and, since 1777, also of the city's Archbishops. A number of rooms with lavish artistic décor, created gradually from the late 17th to the early 20th century, have been preserved in the interior of the palace.

The halls can be used on a short-term basis for holding social and cultural events (receptions, conferences, training sessions, graduation ceremonies, concerts, award presentations, etc.) that do not conflict with good morals or go against the ethics of the Church. Wedding ceremonies are not held here. The furniture in the hired premises can largely be rearranged to suit the nature of the event. The premises have wheelchair access with a lift. Catering is always provided by an external company. The maximum capacity is 180 people.
